The most special nature of aloe is its surface layer of slippery "polysaccharide", the mucosal and surface layer of the penetration is very strong. Vascular wall, lymphatic vessels, trachea, esophagus, gastrointestinal mucosa are inherent protective film. The protective film will be damaged due to aging, inflammation, or pressure, etc. The high permeability of aloe vera will rapidly stick on the protective film to do the repair.

Our body has 100 trillion of cells, the cell membrane contains adipose tissue and polysaccharide (glycoprotein), to protect the cell membrane, and maintain the cell membrane osmotic pressure, so that the good nutrients can be penetrated in, while the waste generated by the metabolism of cells can be discharged.

The components inside the aloe vera juice can activate the macrophages in the white blood cells (T-cell) and increase the number of immune cells. Through the blood circulation, immune cells transported to the injured and infected parts, to fight against the virus, and interfere with the virus's ability to reproduce.
